Charles Dickens at 200: The Novels in the Context of His Time and Ours

Mark Schenker, Dean of Academic Affairs in Yale College, will explore the fiction of Charles Dickens (born February 7, 1812) in a series of book discussions that consider him both as a product of the Victorian Age and as a writer who has transcended his time, his place, and his medium. We will begin with a biography of Dickens and then move on to four of his lesser-read novels, works that give insight into Dickens' talent, the intersections of his life and art, and his development as a writer.

A series of free programs at

WILLOUGHBY WALLACE MEMORIAL LIBRARY
